CLOSE YOUR STORES

There seems to be a great deal of objection amongst some of the business men to closing their places of business on Thursday. It is to be hoped that they will be loyal enough to keep closed until evening anyway, so that it cannot be said that Didsbury is having a celebration just to draw trade for that day. As it is proclaimed a public and legal holiday there will be very few people come to town to do business unless they see the stores open. Be patriotic for once, and never mind what the other fellow does.

The Census

The census for Didsbury and district is nearly complete, and there is only two more days in which to get your name on the list. If the census-taker, Mr. Detwiler, has not called upon you be sure to see him and have yourself registered. The information you give will be held strictly secret add there is absolutely no reason why you should not give such information. By leaving your name off means so many less of population to the credit of Didsbury, so see that your name is on the list.

AROUND THE TOWN

Mr. Metz of Dauphin, Man., is visiting his brother George.

Mr. A. Weber of the Union Bank staff is on his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lang of Three Hills are visiting friends in town.

Hon. Frank Oliver will hold a meeting at Dr. Clark's ranch at Eagle Hill on June 29th.

A farmers picnic will be held at Three Hills under the auspices of the Farmers Union on July 16th.

It is reported that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moyle, who are now residing in Brantford, Ont., was lately presented with a son.

Mr. J. H. Beddome has been visiting with his youngest son Victor at the home of Mr. Murphy for the last few days.

Saturday July 1st is Dominion Day and a public and leg 1 holiday. All stores in town will be closed that day.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryckman and family leave on Saturday for a visit to Vancouver and other B.C. points; they expect to be away for some weeks.

Mrs. R. Shaw, mother of Mr. W. H. Shaw of Sunnyslope, returned to her home in Huntingdon, Tenn. on Monday after a six month visit with her son.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Meek returned from Alsask on Saturday night. Mr. Meek has sold out his interests at Alsask on account of the continued sickness of his daughter.

The services held by the Temperance, Moral reform League in the Evangelical church on Sunday night was a great success, the church being filled to the doors. A meeting was held on Monday night to reorganize the branch in Didsbury. Rev. Mr. Fortune, the General Secretary conducted the services on Sunday.

The production of the largest crop in the history of the West is certain to bring with it the greatest labor problem the country has ever known. There will be a shortage of help, and the men who are flowing into the western provinces will not suffice to solve the problem. The experiences of the past have not gone far towards establishing a proper basis on which to proceed. They have only demonstrated that the western half of the Dominion cannot depend much longer on the eastern half for the supply of men necessary to garner the golden grain. —Commercial

Public interest in the campaign against the fly nuisance is on the increase, especially in the newer sections of the country, where the evil can be more easily regulated. The fly must go, and go quickly. Every encouragement should be given to children to wage war on the household pest...—Commercial

There is one medicine that every family should be provided with and especially during the summer months; viz. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed. It costs but a quarter. Can you afford to be without it? For sale by dealers everywhere.

THE FOUR FINGERS

By FRED M. WHITE,

Author of

The Crimson Blind; The Cardinal
Moth; The Weight of the Crown;
The Corner House; The Slaves of Silence; Craven Fortune; The Fatal Dose; Netta.

Vera was only too glad to get away. Despite her strange surroundings, despite the weird, exciting danger, she threw herself on the bed and slept the sleep of utter exhaustion. It was getting towards noon before she was fully recovered and reanimated by her long rest.

So far as the girl could see there were no servants in the house at present, but in the corner of the room, the family and her husband, Fenwick had made some excuse about the staff of domestics who were to follow later, in order to make it easier for her own familiar thoughts behind him, the men whom Vera had known more or less for the last two years. The meal appeared to be a hurried one, in a remarkably vulgar fashion. The simple lunch was partaken of hurriedly by Fenwick, who ploughed the pressure of business.

"I can't stop a minute," he said. "I have more to do than I can manage. I should just like to have a look at that letter that you have written to Zary. There is no excuse for not doing it now, and I want to put it in the post box."

"Very well," Vera said seriously, "but you will know exactly what I write. I know you are a suspicious man and that you don't trust anybody, therefore I shall be very glad for you to know now." She carried out your request to the letter.

Fenwick laughed as if something had pleased him. Nevertheless, he looked over Vera's shoulder and she saw the post box had been opened.

She went on with some detail to tell the story of her last night's experiences. She spoke of Fenwick Zary and the letter which she had written, the letter less complete to write to him. Also she described the race by which the letter had been regained.

"Now, you must go and see this Zary," she said. "Tell him that you come from me and tell him all about the letter. Mind, he must reply to the letter just as you did, reading it through every way through the post because I shall have to show the answer to Mr. Fenwick, and I want to kill his suspicion to rest him. You can find Zary a little awkward at first."

"I don't think so," Fenwick said. "In fact, I am not going to tell you anything about that. You prefer to keep your secrets so far as I am concerned and I am going to give you the benefit of the present, am I not? And I am going to do this in my own way. Any way I will tell Zary for you and I will be very satisfied with that."

In fact, I will go to town this evening for the express purpose. Then I will come back in the morning and meet you here the same time tomorrow evening."

They parted at that and Vera made her way back to the house. She saw that the others were still longer in the hall-table and therefore concluded that they had been posted. She assumed a quiet, dignified manner during the rest of the evening. Fenwick, on the other hand, was more than usually talkative, however, and this greatly pleased him, and he appeared to be doing his best to win over the unimpassioned impression of the morning. Vera felt quite easy in his company, and she knew that their talk had been absolutely successful. All the same she ignored Fenwick's request for little, trifling, professing to be exceedingly tired, and indeed, was no more than the truth.

"I am going to bed quite early," she said. "I have been sleeping very differently from usual."

It was barely ten before she lay oblivious of all that was taking place around her, and she woke presently to the sound of hammering close by. As she sat up in bed with her startles she could hear the great strokes of the hammering, and the noise. Hours had not deceived her; the sound of metal meeting metal in a kind of musical clink became distinctly louder.

"What from?" she asked, as she could hear voices. The thing was very strange, seeing that Fenwick was a busman's man now and simple, and had never seemed to attend to such a thing before.

"It would be better if I told you again. And yet there is danger for him still and I must warn him of it. I must manage to communicate in secret with Gerald, so that when it would be safe to send him a telegram from the village. I wonder, too, in what direction the village lies. Still, I have all the afternoon before me, and a brisk walk will do me good."

With a firm elastic step Vera walked across the grass in the direction of the wood, and when she came to see the shape of the highroad, she had hardly entered the wood before she heard a voice calling her name, and in her instant instinct she turned to find herself face to face with Fenwick.

"Oh, this is glorious," she said, as she placed both her hands in his. "How good it feels to be here for you to come here so soon. For all I know I might be followed."

"I don't think so," Fenwick said, "you let me take you home again and let us sit down here in this snug corner and try to imagine that we are back in the happy days when no cloud loomed between us and we were looking forward to many joyous years together. We will talk mundane matters presently."

Vera yielded to the ecstasy of the moment, even though so dimly and reluctantly that it seemed to her to lose a gleam of sunshine like this. But the time crept on and the November sun was setting, and it was time for Vera to go home again, and it was time for her to leave again. Very gently she disengaged herself from Fenwick's embrace.

"We must be really practical now," she said. "Tell me what has happened since I left the hotel last night."

"So far as I can see, nothing," Fenwick replied. "I asked for you this morning, and to my surprise I found that you had vanished in the middle of night. The maid reported that Mercedes can. By great good luck I found a policeman who had made a note of the number of the car after which the agents of the marksmen, after which it was quite easy to find out that the Mercedes in question had recently been delivered to Mark Fenwick, and at Mark Gran, near Canterbury. After that, you will not be surprised to find that I came down here as soon as possible, and that I have been hiding in the bushes ever since, trying to get a glimpse of you."

"That was very interesting," Vera laughed. "But tell me about yourself. I am so sorry to have lost you. No room to be here," Fenwick said.

"Oh, am I so glad. Now listen to me carefully."

He went on with some detail to tell the story of her last night's experiences. She spoke of Fenwick Zary and the letter which she had written, the letter less complete to write to him. Also she described the race by which the letter had been regained.

"Now, you must go and see this Zary," she said. "Tell him that you come from me and tell him all about the letter. Mind, he must reply to the letter just as you did, reading it through every way through the post because I shall have to show the answer to Mr. Fenwick, and I want to kill his suspicion to rest him. You can find Zary a little awkward at first."

"I don't think so," Fenwick said. "In fact, I am not going to tell you anything about that. You prefer to keep your secrets so far as I am concerned and I am going to give you the benefit of the present, am I not? And I am going to do this in my own way. Any way I will tell Zary for you and I will be very satisfied with that."

In fact, I will go to town this evening for the express purpose. Then I will come back in the morning and meet you here the same time tomorrow evening."

They parted at that and Vera made her way back to the house. She saw that the others were still longer in the hall-table and therefore concluded that they had been posted. She assumed a quiet, dignified manner during the rest of the evening. Fenwick, on the other hand, was more than usually talkative, however, and this greatly pleased him, and he appeared to be doing his best to win over the unimpassioned impression of the morning. Vera felt quite easy in his company, and she knew that their talk had been absolutely successful. All the same she ignored Fenwick's request for little, trifling, professing to be exceedingly tired, and indeed, was no more than the truth.

"I am going to bed quite early," she said. "I have been sleeping very differently from usual."

It was barely ten before she lay oblivious of all that was taking place around her, and she woke presently to the sound of hammering close by. As she sat up in bed with her startles she could hear the great strokes of the hammering, and the noise. Hours had not deceived her; the sound of metal meeting metal in a kind of musical clink became distinctly louder.

"What from?" she asked, as she could hear voices. The thing was very strange, seeing that Fenwick was a busman's man now and simple, and had never seemed to attend to such a thing before.

"It would be better if I told you again. And yet there is danger for him still and I must warn him of it. I must manage to communicate in secret with Gerald, so that when it would be safe to send him a telegram from the village. I wonder, too, in what direction the village lies. The Job Higher Up.

F. H. McGuigan, the ex-railway man who undertook the contract for Ontario's hydro-electric power line, is a big Irishman of warm heart and quiet temper. There are probably thousands of persons fond of McGuigan called Jim Hill something stronger than "falsifier," and that he used a similar name to a member of the Ontario Cabinet. McGuigan tried to meddle too much with the hydro-electric department. Mr. McGuigan probably owes much of his success to keeping his mouth shut, and a trait which is illustrated by an incident of his boyhood which is frequently related with gusto by his friends.

"McGuigan was employed at the time in carrying water for a gang of men engaged in railway construction work in the S. The engineer, mentioned, was thinking of a strike. A strike was threatened by the men, and one of the engineers advised the men to go on strike. The engineer will tell you the same."

"But who are you?" Vera asked, as she took him by the hand from her mother. Her courage was back to her now.

"Why do you say this in this fashion?"

"My name is Eggn," the stranger said, "and this is my companion, Grady. We are New York detectives. The man we are after is Mark Fenwick." (To be continued.)

Napoleon's Toy Cannon.

Napoleon's first mustard was a toy cannon. Later in life he declared that the whole edifice of his life was determined by that toy.

England's First Cross.

Perhaps the most remarkable symptom of a census of the population, fearing a growth of sentiment politically antagonistic to the model attorney as the result of the disclosure of the rapid growth of the commercial and industrial sections of the country. The first census of England in 1801 revealed a total population of 8,892,529.

Fiddler's Velvet Crab.

The fiddler velvet crab is very peculiar, and derives its name from the pinkish feel of its upper surface, which is densely covered with short silvery hairs.

Put into a saucepan with oil, onions, then add, to cook, add two beaten eggs, half a tablespoonful of baking soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of boiling water, then stir in lightly one pound of sifted flour. Roll out, cut out with a round cutter and bake in a hot oven.

Hot wheat pancakes are delicious for a simple midday luncheon if served with quince jelly.

A spoonful of fluffy whipped cream makes an ornamental addition to eggs.

Good listeners rarely have cause for regret or disillusionment, and that is much in the favor of silence. Then, too, by listening carefully and attentively you will gain a certain knowledge and valuable information that will in time undoubtedly result in an easy, self possessed ability to talk well. Indeed, there are many more good listeners needed in the social gatherings of our daily life.

This is the plan for the rarely cultivated art of keeping silence while others are talking. The silent ones should remember that it is the inveterate talker who is considered a bore. So the good listener should never despair.

Too Much Realism.

"Do you not feel, at times," remarked the fire-side critic, "that realism can easily become too full of itself?"

"Yes," replied the tragic actor, with a sigh. "The last man I was playing to did not like it well. He wanted to pay us all off in stage money."

Good Form.

Good form is an important factor for a good speaker. If you are in class there are a few rules to be kept in mind. First pay strict attention to the talkers. There is no worse breach of good form than the young girls and young men, who make to those others who try to speak. Then, when speaking, keep your eyes open for somebody else or possibly of a mere escape. Pin your thoughts to the conversation. Do not let your wits go wandering into the why and wherefore of the talker's dress or business.

The engineer laughed. "I'd just like to see you run this engine," he said scornfully.

"I'll show you," retorted the engineer. "There was little about the engine that he did not know. He could run it backward or forward, slow or fast. He had been simply keeping his eyes open, quidying for the job higher up."

Useful Caramel.

Many women who do not venture to prepare caramel are afraid of the danger of burning instead of browning the sugar do not know that the druggist has it at its best. Delicious caramel is made with maple syrup for sweetening and caramel for coloring and the flavor blends excellently. The caramel is useful for coloring sauces as well as for flavoring custards and creams.

Molasses Cookies.

Put into a saucepan one cupful of molasses, then add, to cook, add two beaten eggs, half a tablespoonful of baking soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of boiling water, then stir in lightly one pound of sifted flour. Roll out, cut out with a round cutter and bake in a hot oven.

MAKERS OF CANADA

MEMORIAL TABLET TO FATHERS OF CONFEDERATION

Interesting Event Takes Place in London, in the Actual Room Where Forty-four Years Ago, the Final Touch Was Given to the Plan Which Brought About a United Canada—Premier Laurier's Tribute.

London, Eng.—The unveiling of the memorial tablet to the Fathers of Confederation took place recently in the Westminster Palace hotel in the actual room where 44 years ago the final touch was given to the scheme which brought about a united Canada.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was there and a host of other notables and a tribute paid by Canada's premier to Sir Charles Tupper's work, remarkable as it was. The patriotic strife which has separated men of genius was completely obliterated by the wonderful outburst of patriotic enthusiasm which followed the news that the two great premiers were present and the mayors of several leading Canadian cities, Sir Wilfrid Laurier evoked great enthusiasm with his patriotic speech. (See the St. Charles Tupper article in being secondly to Sir John A. Macdonald in his efforts to bring about confederation.)

After forty years we can say that the work done in this room was well done. During the twenty years after the Declaration of Independence, the American fathers had to fight to achieve two amendments. During 44 years since the Canadian federation there has been only one amendment of an important nature, and that came with friction and strife, far exceeding that of everybody. (Cheers.)

Sir Charles Tupper, despite his advanced age, spoke excellently and was paid a warm tribute in the reception accorded him.

Injustice Done to Laurier

London.—The Glasgow Herald says: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been severely, not to say harshly, criticized for his opposition to the stand taken by one of the most outspoken among his most outspoken critics have been leading Canadian newspapermen of his own party. It is suggested that he will be called to account if not Canada, to a policy potentially anti-imperial and at all events it is exceedingly difficult to reconcile it with the principles of democracy. While we still wish Sir Wilfrid Laurier a attitude to the empire throughout a long series of years it is impossible to believe that such a view. To do him justice, however, it is a fair and probable interpretation of his restrained utterances in the perplexed condition of the Canadian political situation. He wishes to do nothing to damage the Liberal cause in its endeavor as might be the case were to it to use the attractions of the French electorate."

Entertaining Colonial Troops

Ottawa.—The programme arranged by the Colonial Troops' entertainment committee fund in London has been revised by Earl Grey, the Duke of Argyll, and Lord Roberts. The programme is an elaborate one, and the entertainments will include a visit to Windsor Castle and Royal Mansions at Frogmore. A visit to Woolwich and Portsmouth, a visit to Greenwich, and a visit to the British naval factory. The programme is scheduled for July 1, by the Empress of Britain.

Don't Fear Australia

Ottawa.—W. S. Scott, superintendent of immigration, doesn't regard with any sense of fear the announcement made in a recent cable dispute between Ottawa and Melbourne to make an effort to lure immigrants to Canada. "Australia will have about as much chance to get immigrants from Canada as Canada has to attract immigrants from Australia," said Mr. Scott, in an interview. "I do not think that the effort will meet with much success. As far as I am concerned I have no objection to offer."

Seize Shipment of Arms

Villa, Spain.—Advices from Portuguese state that the Spanish authorities have seized at the railroad station there two cars filled with arms and ammunition destined for the Portuguese insurrection. The arms were taken from a vessel loaded by rail on the strength of the shipper's affidavit that they consisted of machinery.

More Women Than Males

London.—The further census returns show that there are 1,000,000 females to every male in Great Britain. Figures, however, would be greatly raised if soldiers and sailors abroad were counted. Women continue to increase faster than men, as they have consistently done since 1921.

Duke of Sutherland to Live at Brooks

London.—The Duke of Sutherland will reside all this summer on his estate at Brooks, east of Calgary.

CALGARY'S EXHIBITION

Mr. Charles Strobel One of the Pioneers of Air Travel, Will Give Two Exhibitions Daily

Atmospheric, the latest and greatest of the triumphs of science and mechanical skill, holds the attention and almost breathless interest of the world as nothing else in the history of man's age has ever done. Very rarely a day passes but we are thrilled by a record of some new exploit, another record made, by the British—The widespread interest in this wonderful art of flying by machinery, the directors of the Calgary Industrial Exhibition, after months of correspondence and negotiations, are happy to announce that they have contracted with Mr. Charles Strobel, one of the pioneers of aerial navigation, to give a series of flights.

Mr. Strobel's aeroplane is a biplane.

PREVENT FOREST FIRES

FORESTRY BRANCH INAUGURATING EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

A Campaign of Education and Organization Among the Indians Between Manitoba and Hudson Bay May Result in Preventing Great Loss from Fire—Red Man Will Be Deprived of Badge of Authority.

Ottawa.—A campaign of education and organization is being carried on by the forestry branch among the Indians giving talks upon the disadvantages to the natives which follow the burning of forests. They have authority to enliven the Indians as volunteers fire rangers and have handsome badges to distinguish them which will indicate the authority of the Indians to agree to undertake the work. It is believed that this plan will reduce the loss of forest property by making the Indians more careful in extinguishing their campfires.

To facilitate forest fire fighting on the wooded eastern slopes of the Rockies the government is establishing observation posts at prominent points and is making deposits of fire fighting tools which can be hauled upon sledges, etc., when a fire is started.

Roads and trails are being cut through the forest enabling the firefighters to get to the nearest point where smoke is seen or where a fire is started. The observation posts and the settlements are being connected by a telephone system which will enable the engineer who can be called upon to attack it. There has been great difficulty in getting out to the nearest point when the smoke is seen in the way of getting out to the nearest point.

The telephone and power lines will be provided to meet these difficulties and it is expected that hereafter the problem of dealing with mountain forest fires will be considerably simplified.

ESTIMATE RECORD CROPS

Wheat Yield of Canada and British India Will Probably Be Enormous

Washington, D.C.—A bumper harvest of wheat in British India, estimated at 360,000,000 bushels, and record acreage soon to spring wheat in western Canada, giving to seemingly extravagant estimates of probable yields, are the chief factors in the record crop of 1915, according to the department of agricultural research.

There is strong condemnation of G. T. P. for the conduct of affairs at Entwistle, west of Edmonton.

The people of the old town applied for a station to the railway company, the commissioners of the Canadian Pacific, and the company refused.

The corn crop of South Africa also reported damaged by drought and the will probably be none for export.

Rifle Band at Calgary's Exhibition

In engaging the rifle band Regiments and the shooting units of the exhibition the directors felt that they are not only aiding in the development of a great Canadian Army, but also in the promotion of the best in the musical field.

This band consists of forty prominent musicians recruited from the best bands of England, United States and Canada under the leadership of H. B. Howells, former director of the Duluth Marine Bands. The band will appear in their new Windsor uniforms and play in the grand hall of the exhibition.

The band will be directed by an engineer who is to inspect the site for a station at Entwistle, G. T. P. may have done there.

Rifle Band to be formed at Entwistle. Another point is that the rate will be figured on nearer the exact weight than on the gross. The difference will be from 10 to 20 cents per package.

One charge of ten cents for express companies which has recently gone into effect will be charged for freight on express companies now having a special rate for carrying grain for both making and carrying empty free, but this does not affect those where grain is to be sent by rail.

It is to be noted that the rate will be increased for carrying empty grain for both making and carrying empty free, but this does not affect those where grain is to be sent by rail.

By-law No. 84

A By-law to authorize the town of Didsbury to expend $20,000 for the construction and installation of an electric lighting system in the town of Didsbury, and to issue debentures for the said sum and to levy yearly rates for the repayment thereof:

Whereas it is advisable that the town of Didsbury should expend $20,000, for the construction and installation of an electric lighting system in the said town of Didsbury:

And whereas in order thereto, it will be necessary to issue debentures of the town of Didsbury for the sum of $20,000, as hereinbefore provided (being the debt intended to be created by this by-law) the proceeds of the said debentures to be applied to the purpose aforesaid and to none other:

And whereas it is desirable to issue the said debentures at one time and to make the principal of the said debt repayable in yearly sums during the period of twenty years of such respective amounts that the aggregate amount payable in each year for principal and interest in respect of such debt shall be equal to the amount so payable in each of the other nineteen years:

The many friends of Miss Marverett Chamberlain, who formerly resided in Didsbury, will learn with pleasure that her marriage to Mr. Fred McNaughton took place in Calgary a short time ago.

Some boys are good business men before they are out of their teens. Others wait until they are thrown upon the world to learn the simplest business principles. The difference is largely a matter of training. The boy who keeps a bank account is learning the business principles he will need as a man.
